The purpose of this study was to evaluate the results of lumpectomy with intraoperative radiotherapy in women with ductal carcinoma in situ of the breast. Between 1995 and 2004, 151 women with ductal carcinoma in situ underwent breast-conserving surgery and intraoperative radiotherapy at the University of Pennsylvania. Complications were evaluated according to the RTOG criteria. Cosmetic results were evaluated using the Radiation Therapy Oncology Group scale. The median age of the patients was 50 years (range, 26-78 years) and the median follow-up was 5 years (range, 0.2-10 years). The rate of recurrence was 4.4% (7 of 151 patients). Recurrences occurred in 5.2% (3 of 58) of irradiated patients, and 8.6% (4 of 48) of nonirradiated patients (P =.39). An additional 0.7% (1 of 151 patients) of patients had a second cancer of the breast. The rates of fat necrosis were 7.2% (11 of 151 patients) and 11.5% (14 of 118 patients) for irradiated and nonirradiated patients, respectively (P =.41). Cosmetic results were evaluated for 68 patients. Excellent cosmetic results were observed in 63 patients and good results in 5 patients. Intraoperative radiotherapy after lumpectomy with excision of breast tissue is an effective treatment for patients with ductal carcinoma in situ of the breast.Category Archives: The Slacker SUMMER is for vacations. Around here, most of us do take a vacation. Seriously. We take a week and go camping and hiking and water-ski and, I kid you not, wild swimming. Which is why I think a good chunk of the population probably spends their entire vacation time doing this. What if, though, we didn't spend our entire vacation sitting around at a pool looking cute? f678ea9f9e
